

Sensing Danger: Disease, Environment and Urban Vigilance in Early Modern and Modern Cities

Collaborative Research Center 'Cultures of Vigilance' and Rachel Carson Center for Environment and Society
LMU Munich

Leopoldstrasse 11A, Munich
6 December 2019

9:45 Arrival and registration

10:00 - 11:00

Anna Mazanik (RCC)/Brendan Röder/Arndt Brendecke (CRC 'Cultures of Vigilance')

Introduction and presentation of the CRC 'Cultures of Vigilance'

11:00 - 11:30 Coffee break

In the background: Virtual exhibition

Ecopolis München: Environmental Histories of a City

11:30 - 13:00 Panel I

Fritz Dross (University of Erlangen-Nuremberg)

"Und man muß den Ertzten auch würz geben für den smak": Avoiding the Dangerous Smell of Leprosy in Renaissance Nuremberg

Manuel Förg (University of Bonn)

"Ut universa urbs sese possit ab exorienti malo praeservare": Rodrigo de Castro and the Plague in Hamburg (1596/97)

Mark Hengerer (CRC 'Cultures of Vigilance', LMU Munich)

Fighting Plague: Vigilance on the French Mediterranean Coast (1680-1760)

13:00 - 14:00 Lunch at the RCC

14:00 - 15:30 Panel II

Franziska Neumann (German Historical Institute London/University of Rostock)

Rather Pestilence than an Increase of Officers? Waste Infrastructures, Vigilance and the Senses in 18th century London

Ulrike Platt (RCC/University of Tallinn)

Women and Rabies in 19th century Riga

Maria Pirogovskaya (European University at St. Petersburg)

Alerted Nose. Olfactory Vigilance and the Russian Sanitarian Movement in the Post-Reform Era (1870-1900s)

15:30 - 16:00 Coffee break

In the background: Virtual Exhibition

The Life of Waste

16:00 -17:00 Panel III

Anna Mazanik (RCC)

From State Surveillance to Vigilant Clients: Controlling Venereal Disease in Late Imperial Moscow

Graham Mooney (Institute for the History of Medicine, Johns Hopkins University)

The 1989 Baltimore "Biosolids Crisis": A Crisis 50 years in the Making

17:00 - 18:00

Final Discussion

18:30 Dinner